

1. I am not here to have entered still another rule into the Aloha Inn's guidelines, rather I am here to discuss a matter that effects a great many of us and will help to avoid another incident similar to the one that occurred this past Friday.
2. Also, whatever you heard about what happened on Friday, understand that you have likely heard only one side and should therefore doubt its veracity.
3. Just because something is permitted does not mean that it is necessitated.

Music or No Music

Music

- Pleasurable, if you can choose it.
- Potentially disturbing, if you cannot.
- A disinterested third party with a mood message.
- There is no door to close.

No Music

- Pleasurable to some, less pleasurable to others, but a disturbance to no one.
- There is no disinterested third party.
- It can be easily substituted with an ear bud, for anyone who has a need.

Available Choices

- 1) Agree in favor of music
 - 1) Whose music (flip a coin, take turns, etc.)
 - 2) What level of volume
- 2) Agree in favor of silence
 - 2) Nothing to decide
 - 3) If change of opinion on either side, an ear bud can be employed.
- 3) Disagree (two choices)
 - 4) Compromise.
 - 3) Confrontation and Arbitration.

Compromise Between Two (50/50)

90 minutes vs 90 minutes

Your turn, my turn

Only truly fair if music and no-music had equal outcomes no matter the parties to the trade.

You cut, I decide.
